I. INTRODUCTION

PCMC seeks proposals from an artist or artist teams to create a site specific artwork that embodies the themes of community and connectivity for a pedestrian and bicycle tunnel in Park City. PCMC is looking for proposals for art that enhance the user's experience of this space. Experience in creating large scale installations for public space is desired but not required. Total project budget shall not exceed Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000.00). Selected art will be installed in the McPolin/224 connector tunnel.

II. Purpose of Project

Pedestrian and bicycle tunnels in Park City present a unique opportunity for public art that reflects and activates the community, and enhances the City Council's goals for alternative transportation, walkability, and community vibrancy. In Park City, the City Council identified Transportation and Energy as critical priorities in 2015 in response to community input. Existing pedestrian and bicycle tunnels throughout Park City facilitate alternatives to vehicle transportation and present an opportunity for art that enlivens the resident, visitor, and commuter experience.

PCMC has developed a project to complete tunnel art in Park City including the McPolin/224 connector. Adding art to these spaces will ensure connector tunnels in Park City are vibrant reflections of the community and places of community pride and creative expression. The piece that is selected for the McPolin/224 connector should promote the history and cultural value of the area, specifically the McPolin Farm. Artists are welcome to use media that are durable for outdoor conditions.

Background:

The McPolin Farm was purchased by the citizens of Park City in 1990 to protect and enhance the entry corridor and maintain open space. The original 160-acre farm was homesteaded in 1886 by the Harrison McLane family and acquired by Isabelle McPolin and Dan McPolin around 1900. In 1908, the McPolins erected the barn of recycled timber salvaged from an old tailings mill. The barn was built by fitting timbers together without the use of nails. The reconstructed equipment shed houses restrooms and meeting space.

Patrick McPolin and Grace McPolin inherited the farm in 1923 and operated it as a dairy farm until they sold it to D. A. Osguthorpe, a Salt Lake veterinarian, in 1948. He increased the herd to 100 and built the milking parlor. The old house burned shortly after Osguthorpe purchased the farm. A concrete block house was built across the highway where members of the family lived until Park City purchased the farm in 1990.

The farm has been extensively refurbished, including a structural upgrade on the barn, to maintain it as the most significant visual feature of the valley and an entry corridor landmark. The bucolic setting provides a haven from today's fast-paced life and welcomes residents and visitors to Park City. A hiking/skiing/biking trail is located along the upper edge of the property. The structure is located in a residential and commercial neighborhood, surrounded by single family homes and condominiums, is accessible by the City's free public transportation system, and has easy vehicular access from main thoroughfares and walking/biking routes.

The Public Art Advisory Board (PAAB) is an advisory board to the Park City Council.
